We all went down to cooking school, To learn to make a cake; And bread and salad, pies and buns We also learned to make.

We were in an awful hurry.
And forgot to sat our lunch.
And when the things were passed around.
Tes even to the punch

We helped ourselves in royal style, Nor stopped to wonder if There'd be enough for all the rest To tasts or even smiff.

We brought our ear-drums to the school, Our fancy work as well, Our bowder puffs and looking glass, And little Mae and Nell. We took our hais off (if we pleased), Or left them on our heads, We knowled and signled just like kids, Dut heard most all she said.

We wrote down all the recipes she gave us at the school: While hubby wanders home from work, As hungry as a nuis.

He have the fire and makes his tea.
